

Women Helping Women

The University of Wisconsin-Madison
Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology

TISSUE BANK

is currently collecting obstetric tissue and fluid that would otherwise be discarded after delivery at Meriter Hospital.

Tissue samples will be used in research studies to learn more about conditions that affect women and babies during pregnancy. These samples may include umbilical cord tissue and blood, maternal blood and placenta.

Participation in this study is purely voluntary and the identities of tissue donors will be protected. No extra hospital visits or procedures will be necessary.
